

Solutions

The rise of the prenup

There's a lot of details to think about when planning a wedding. Things like booking an officiant, finding the right venue, and hiring a photographer, DJ and caterer. But there's something else you may want to consider before the big day arrives.

A prenuptial agreement, or prenup, outlines specific expectations for a marriage and the division of assets in the event of a divorce.

Although it has a stigma, introducing a prenup can be a gateway to having open and honest discussions about your financial position and assets before you tie the knot.

By sharing information with your partner about your investments, debt, real estate holdings, and even valuable items like jewelry and coin collections, you're taking responsibility for protecting your future as a couple and an individual.

There are lots of different ways to set up a prenup, and they're usually completed with the help of a lawyer

Marriage is a big step – and your advisor can act as a neutral sounding board for all matters related to your financial interests, including the details of a prenup.

Copyright 2023 Manulife. All rights reserved. This material is the property of The Manufacturers Life Insurance Company (Manulife) and is under limited license. It may not be copied, transmitted or used without Manulife's express written approval. Manulife is not responsible for any damages or losses arising from any use of this information. The persons and situations depicted are fictional and their resemblance to anyone living or dead is purely coincidental. This media is for information purposes only and is not intended to provide specific financial, tax, legal, accounting or other advice and should not be relied upon in that regard. Many of the issues discussed will vary by province. Individuals should seek the advice of professionals with respect to this information and any action taken. Manulife, the Block Design, the Four Cube Design and Strong Reliable Trustworthy Forward-thinking are trademarks of The Manufacturers Life Insurance Company and are used by it, and by its affiliates under license.